

Youth charged with offences were more likely to have a mental health condition than youth not charged

6,311 youth were charged with offences in Alberta in 2008/09.

Youth with one or more charges were more likely to have a mental health condition than youth with no charges. This may be partially due to increased access to mental health services for youth charged with an offence.

For more information, see our report Offence Charges Among Albertan Youth.

