

Emergency room visits were less common among youth exceeding educational expectations than among youth meeting or below expectations

326,685 visits to emergency rooms were made by 163,411 Albertan youth 12 to 24 years old in 2008/09.

Youth who were achieving above educational expectations were less likely to use emergency rooms compared to those who were meeting or performing below expectations.

16% of youth performing below educational expectations had multiple emergency room visits compared to 10% of youth meeting expectations and 5% of youth achieving above expectations.
